FIRST BLOW FOR FREEDOM.

ON APRIL 19th, 1775, the first blood of the American revolution was shed at the battle of Lexington, made famous by the ride of Paul Revere from Charlestown to Lexington, to warn the inhabitants of the intervening towns of the coming of the British. On Monday, March 20th the convention of delegates from the several corporations and counties of Virginia met for the second time. Patrick Henry was a member of that body. For a year the colonies had labored under great stress of mind over the injustice heaped on them by King George III, but they were averse to taking any radical action. There were pacifists in those days as there are now. These men were opposed by the patriots who demanded an immediate separation at any cost, but they were almost in the minority for there were sufficient wavering votes to offset the insistent call for early and positive action. It was at this juncture that Patrick Henry rose and acquitted himself of the address which conceived the thought of a new nation. Mr. Henry saw things with a clear eye and steady insight. He could not hesitate between two courses. The gulf of war which yawned before him was indeed fiery and fearful, but he saw the awful plunge was inevitable. The body of the convention, however, hesitated. They cast around a long lingering look on the flowery fields in which peace, and ease, and joy, were still sporting, and it required all the energies of a Mentor like Henry to push them from the precipice and conduct them over the stormy sea of revolution to liberty and glory. His was a spirit fitted to raise a whirlwind as well as to ride it. His was the comprehensive view, that unerring prescience, that perfect command over the actions of men which qualified him not merely to guide, but also to create the destinies of nations. He rose at this time with a majesty unusual to him in an exordium and with all that self possession for which he was distinguished. In the course of his remarks he said: "They tell us sir, that we are weak—unable to cope with so formidable an adversary. But when shall we be stronger? Will it be the next week or the next year? Will it be when we are totally disarmed and when a British guard shall be stationed in every house? Shall we gather strength by irresolution and inaction? Shall we acquire the means of effectual resistance by lying supinely on our backs and hugging the delusive phantom of hope until our enemies shall have bound us hand and foot? Sir, we are not weak, if we make a proper use of these means which the God of nature has placed in our power. Three millions of people, armed in the holy cause of liberty and in such a country as that we possess, are invincible by any force which our enemy can send against us. Besides, sir, we shall not fight our battles alone. There is a just God who presides over the destinies of nations and who will raise up friends who will fight our battles for us. The battle is not to the strong alone; it is to the vigilant, the active, the brave. Besides, we have no election. If we were base enough to desire it, it is now too late to retire from the contest. There is no retreat but in submission and slavery! Our chains are forged. Their clanking may be heard on the plains of Boston! The war is inevitable—and let it come! I repeat it, let it come!"

"It is vain to extenuate the matter. Gentlemen may cry peace, peace—but there is no peace. The war is actually begun! The next gale that sweeps from the north will bring to our ears the clash of resounding arms. Our brethren are already in the field! Why stand we here idle? What is that gentlemen wish? What would they have? Is life so dear, or peace so sweet, as to be purchased at the price of chains and slavery? Forbid it, Almighty God!—I know not what course others may take, but as for me," cried the orator with both his arms extended aloft, his brows knit, every feature marked with resolute purpose of his soul, and his voice swelled to its boldest note of exclamation—"give me liberty or give me death!"

The historian in describing the effect of the speech goes on to narrate as follows: "He took his seat. No murmur of applause was heard. The effect was too deep. After the trance of a moment, several members started from their seats. The cry 'To Arms!' seemed to quiver on every lip and gleam from every eye. Richard H. Lee arose and supported Mr. Henry with his usual spirit and elegance. But his melody was lost amid the agitation of that ocean which the master spirit of the storm had lifted up on high. That supernatural voice still sounded in their ears and shivered along their arteries. They heard in every pause, the cry of 'liberty or death.' They became impatient of speech—their souls were on fire for action."

HARMONY FOR MANHATTAN.

EVENTS of the past twenty-four hours have determined the stability and permanency of the future of Manhattan. Great interests drawn together by the same purpose have fused their forces, blended their finances and buried animosities for the one purpose of developing and fostering the growth of a greater Manhattan. Since the rejuvenation of the camp through the alchemical transmutation of the refractory ores of the sulphide zone was established there has been a rivalry that at once time menaced the prosperity of the camp. These differences have been smoothed over and discord silenced by the formation of a company that promises to be one of the strongest combinations of mine operators ever assembled under one corporate banner. Pittsburg and Salt Lake have coalesced in a marriage that is the harbinger of long years of prosperity and wealth for those brought together by the alliance. The men behind the new Manhattan realize that the future is in their own making and that there is no room for dissension or disaffection. These men have come together with the intention of doing their utmost to develop the vast mineral resources of the Pine Tree camp and the best proof of their success lies in the fact that they exhibit the get-together spirit that is so necessary to the co-operation of interest to the end that results can only be had by avoiding friction and through consolidation to gain the most economic efficiency. Three powerful syndicates are safely installed in the camp and these three are supplemented by a score of lesser companies, all of which boast of ample treasuries to proceed with active development with the intention of reaching the values which have been made famous by the advancement of the White Caps, Manhattan Consolidated and Union Amalgamated from station of negligible values to an eminence where the future is assured. Less than three months ago no one would have dreamed that Manhattan would become the objective of some of the richest and most potential influences in the mining world, but the fact has come to pass and today finds Manhattan ebullient and optimistic with the knowledge that every promise of the past has been redeemed by the enlistment of capital capable of demonstrating the truth of what was told ten years ago. The latest amalgamation of interests implies that Manhattan will be the camp of endeavor and practical work and not an illusory rainbow whose gorgeousness vanishes with the sinking of the sun. The day of redemption is at hand and the resurrection and glorification is nigh. The specter of litigation has been banished from the precincts of the camp and the watchword and slogan henceforth will be the Nevada motto of "All for Our Country."

BOYS AND GIRLS WORK ON FARMS

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS ENROLL TO INCREASE SUPPLY OF FOOD

(By Associated Press.)
CHICAGO, April 19.—Joseph B. Griffith, president of the board of trade, today subscribed $1000 on behalf of the board, for paying of fares of high school boys who have volunteered for farm work. The interstate commerce commission had advised those in charge of the board of education plan for using high school students for food production that under the law, the railroads could not provide free transportation. The street car boys have agreed to transport pupils to truck gardens without cost.

Other cities have joined in the plan for farm and garden work by school boys and girls, notably Kansas City and Minneapolis.

It means an increase of seven shillings a week.

AEROBATIC AIRPLANE FOR ELUDING AN ENEMY

(By Associated Press.)
LONDON, April 19.—In a test of a new airplane designed by army experts for "aerobatics," or adroit maneuvering in air combat, an instructor looped the loop sideways eight times, starting at an altitude of 1800 feet and finishing within 200 feet of the ground. The wings of the machine revolved like windmills during the maneuver, at the conclusion of which the aviator regained his even keel and soared upward.
